Coins of Early Days.

The early Biblical references to pieces of Mosaic "oblation to God" was a haif shekel, and the shekel is explained by Jo sephus as equal to four Athenian drachmae, of a value of about 55% cents in Ameri an money. The first Jewish coinage un der authority was, it is believed, struck by Simon the Maccabee, about the year 140 B. C. It consisted of shekels and half shekels. This coinage had its value signi-fied upon it, "Shekel Israel," in Samari-

"on thy brothers, who are poor," while it was more or less permitted against a stran ger.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Inequality in Eyes.

As the inferior animals, so far as I know have no habit of peeping or looking with one eye shut and the other open, it occurred to me that this ability might be a limited one. I tried the experiment with school children, and to my surprise found that a few were quite unable to keep one eye shut and the other open at the same time, and were likewise under similar limits, but to a less extent. This may be the reason why the discovery of inequality of vision, as Sir

John Herschel remarks, is often made late in life. Indeed, he mentions an elderly person who made the unpleasant discovery that he was altogether blind of an eye.—

Brass and Bronze. Brass and brouze are two alloys of copper. The first is composed of copper and zinc, the latter of copper and tin. Both historically and scientifically these two compound metals are of greater interest than almost any others. Copper was one of the first metals discovered, extracted and utilized in the earliest periods of our history, and antiquaries are accustomed to speak of a "bronze age" to express that in terval of time during which this metal formed many of the implements used for industrial purposes and in warfare. - Cham

DRIVEN TOMARRIAGE

Everybody declared that Hugh Colewood ought to be the happiest man in Greenville. He was young, handsome and well edu-cated; then, just as he was preparing to fight his way to fame with poverty arrayed against him, he had suddenly been made the sole heir to the fine old estate of his eccentric aunt. Miss Betay Colewood, recently deceased.

What more was necessary to the happiness of a gay young fellow like Hugh Cole-wood? Nothing, it seemed to the envious

However, there were conditions, or one at least, in his aunt's will which caused him no little uneasiness. He must love and marry the girl of her choice, one whom he had never even seen.

Hugh Colewood caught up his aunt's last letter to him and rend it again and again, hoping to find some little loophole of escape from the galling condition But it was there in merciless black and white. . This is the part that worried him: "If you cannot comply with my wishes for you to meet Ethel Wayne and love and marry her, you forfeit your heirship to my estates. Ethel's mother was my dearest friend, and if you marry her daughter it will be fulfilling my fondest desires. You cannot help loving her.

"I could not rest in my tomb peacefull?

and know that Ethel was not mistress of my estates, and you, dear boy, the master. My lawyer, Mr. Cranston, will arrange for you to meet Ethel, as he is one of her guardiaus. You know how thoroughly I despise old bandelors, therefore I give you many that I will see allow a superior that I will see allow. Donnybrook Night.

So had written the eccentric spinster.

Hugh nibbled the ends of his mustache impatiently as he pondered on the conditions which the will imposed.

Hugh loved the Colewood estates, and could not bear to think of giving them up. Now, if the will had not specified whom he must marry, but left the selection of a wife entirely to himself, Hugh believed Prices 15, 25, 35 and 50c. Seats now on sale at F. C. Richts 206 E. He picked up his hat and rushed from his room, going up to the hotel where Mr. Cranston was stopping, while he arranged some business matters with Hugh.
"Helio, Colewood! Have a seat," said (Furnished by Applegate & Mallory, the lawyer, scrutinizing the flushed face and nervous manner of his visitor. He was just wondering to himself if the unex-pected good fortune had turned young Colewood's head, when his visitor re

Light at once dawned upon the lawyer, and there was a twinkle in his eyes. How-ever, he asked indifferently: To what peculiar feature do you refer, Mr. Colewood?

"The one that absurdly commands me t marfy a girl that I have never seen." "Oh, that!" returned Mr. Cranston.
"You are a fucky fellow, Colewood. That's the best part of the fortune."

"It's the most exasperating part," Hugh cried desperately, "How can a fellow love and wed to order!" "Well, it's a deal of time and bother saved to the wooer," remarked the lawyer, puffing. "I've no doubt Ethel Wayne will suit you better than any selection you are capable of making."

"At least, you must meet. I will arrange that. Ethel will pass the summer with my sister in the country and I'll man-age it for you to spend a few weeks with them. You can very soon tell whether the condition is wholly obnoxious or not. What do you say?"

"I will do as you advise, thank you, sir replied Hugh, who had now cooled off and was trying to take a business view of the strange situation.
Four weeks later Hugh Colewood was speeding away from Greenville on the morning express, bound for a little town among the blue hills of Virginia.

When he stepped from the train he was disappointed to find no one waiting to con-vey him to the country home of Mr. Cranston's sister, a distance of eight miles.

He was in the act of asking the way to the best hotel when a buggy came rapidly up to the station and halted. The station agent burried forward to meet the driver, who was a slender young girl, with bright, dark eyes and hair as golden as the June sunbeams touching

"Is Mr. Colewood, of Greenville, waiting here to ride out to Mrs. Thurston's?" quired the fair driver in a sweet voice which won Hugh's interest at once.

"So you are Miss Wayne's consin! I do not remember hearing Mr. Cranston men-tion you. I did not expect to have the pleasure of meeting any ladies but Mrs. Thurston and Miss Wayne."

"How unkind in Mr. Cranston not to prepare you for this meeting," and there was a roguish gleam in her eyes which Hugh did not see. "I had up to date re-garded Mr. Cranston as one of my very best friends, but to ignore me so utterly, when he knew I would accompany Cousin Ethel here, looks like downright inten-"You have not given me the pleasure of

"Oh, Pm a Wayne, too," she answered laughingly. "Ethel Estella Wayne, variously nicknamed, as you will observe Two Ethel Waynest Here was a real surprise for Colewood. Why had Cranston not mentioned that strange fact to him? If the Ethel Wayne referred to in the will was only half as animated and generally captivating as the one by his side Hugh thought it might be an easy matter after all to obey that condition which had Colewood received a cordial welcome at

Mrs. Thurston's pleasant home. He found Miss Wayne to be a tall, dignified girl of about twenty-three, with coal black hair and deep gray eyes. She was as unlike her little merry hearted cousin as it was pos-

Yes, Hugh decided she was just such a woman as his eccentric aunt would be likely to select as the wife of her heir. In the weeks which followed Hugh's arrival he saw a great deal of Miss Wayne, although much of her time was divided be-tween her taste for literature and in remonstrating against the innocent pranks It did not require a long time for the young man to realize that he could never love Miss Wayne as the man should love He made another important discovery, that his life would be a failure without the little consin to furnish daily sunshine and

He came suddenly upon a little figure in white, reading, in a little viney nook by "Wait, Estelle," he called for she had On or address

ary piquancy which had more than once exasperated Hugh. "I'd be sorry to have you leave us with any burden on your mind," she said pro

"It is needless for me to tell you why it was arranged for me to meet Miss Wayne here," he said, unheeding her light words.

"You know, I suppose."

"Some slight idea, I believe," she returned, fingering her book.

"Well, I may as well tell you that that condition in my late aunt's will can never he folding." be fulfilled."

'And why not?" "Because I love another." he cried pas-sionately. "Oh, Estelle! can you not see how tenderly, how ardently I love you? Without you I shall make a failure of life. Won't you show mercy, Estelle?"
"Oh, Hugh! would you marry a poor girl when you have a chance to win a dignified bride and retain those princely estates?"

"Yes, darling. I prefer you with love in a cottage to the wealthiest woman with all the estate in the world!" "Rash statement, young man."

"Oh, there's Uncte Cranston!" and she rushed forward to great the little lawyer, who had approached them unseen. "It is useless for me to ignore facts," said Mr. Cranston pleasantly. "I did not mean to oversiear your conversation, but I arrived unexpectedly and thought I'd hunt up my sprite here and surprise her. I see you understand each other pretty clearly."

"Yes, sir." said Hugh bravely; "I have decided to enjoy love in a cottage with this dear girl rather than keep the estate with Miss Wayne."

"Love in a cottage! Oh, that's too And Mr. Cranston broke into a hearty laugh, in which the girl finally joined

"Will you have the goodness to explain what amuses you so much in my state-ment?" asked Hugh, not a little nettled. "Pardon me, Colewood. But, really, you are the victim of your own blunder."

"Blunder! I don't understand you sir," returned Hugh. "Of course not," and the lawyer laughed again. "This sprite, whom you took to be the unimportant little cousin, is in reality the Ethel Wayne referred to in your aunt's will. I did not tell you that there were two Ethel's, so while she was driving you over here you jumped to the conclusion that Miss Wayne at the house was the

THOS. SHAW.

I am glad to see that the people of this sunny clime are calling for better goods and willing to pay for them: and to supply this demand I have put to a larger and finer stock of Pianos and Organs than beretofore. The 1872 goods are far superior to last year in every way and I have the best that factories can produce. If you want trash I cannot suit you, I only want customers that want good goods at the lowest price, Poor goods are dear at any price. If you are going to buy this spring don't buy 'till you see my stock. I will save you all agents communions. I will make terms say.

I have a few goods a little used at big bargains for those who do not want to put much money into an investment.

Come and see me, I shall be gled to show you what I have.

If you want a Bicynle I am your man; Columbia Victor, for high grade; Hartfard and Credenda for next.
